

SCOREBOARD FOR THE EU'S ACTIONS TO TACKLE INEQUALITIES

	Are rising inequalities part of the problem description?	Is addressing inequality a political priority?	Is inequality understood as multidimensional?	Is inequality understood as intersectional?	Do they propose concrete targeted action to fight inequalities?	Do they propose solutions to mainstream equality?

“ Thanks to the multidimensional experience of its members working closely with people across the globe facing various often compounding forms of discrimination, CONCORD can offer insights and flag discrepancies between commitments and action. Our Confederation looks forward to engaging with EU decision-makers to further raise the ambition going forward.”

Chair of CONCORD's inequalities group

CONCLUSIONS

CONCORD is pleased to observe a trend towards increasingly covering inequalities in the problem description and priority list of EU policy documents in the field of international cooperation.

However, the EU-Africa Strategy, the External Investment Plan, the Africa-Europe Alliance for Sustainable Investment and Jobs and the international dimension of the Digital Agenda are striking exceptions to this and are particularly equality-blind.

Only two of these documents explicitly mention and properly apply a multidimensional and intersectional approach to addressing inequalities in partner countries.

When it comes to proposing targeted solutions, many of the actions remain rather vague or abstract.

In terms of mainstreaming equality, very few documents seem to know how to go about this in the respective areas they cover.
